

Falaaaaaaa meus queridos amiguinhos! How are you today? I hope your week was awesome 🙌

To be able to see some fun stuff (including the giant snail we saw), join the google photos album:

<https://photos.app.goo.gl/4P9d4ozmNzrznkWr7>

This week was a super fun week, and we even had a great division with our Zone Leaders, who happen to be another companionship in our ward. It was a blast. Let's move onto the...

Eventos Notáveis:

- Wednesday, we visited a family in our area. They live on the boundaries of our area, almost a different ward. Super long from our house but it was well worth it. The dad, Pedro, is an inactive member of the church, and his wife, Patricia, isn't baptized but she's interested in learning more about the church! They are super cool. We're gonna be working hard to get them at church on Sunday.

- Friday, we had a division with the ZLs like I said. I got to be with Elder Black, who was in my district back when I was in Parelheiros no começo da minha missão 😊 It was an awesome division. We had a fire lesson with our friend Priscila, and then we passed by the house so Elder Black could leave his backpack, but as we went to leave, it started to pour outside. Friday morning was super hot and sunny, so we weren't expecting this. São Paulo is no joke bro.

Elder Black didn't have an umbrella, nor a raincoat, and he was still super down to work, so I went out with him in solidarity, even though I had a raincoat to use. Two white guys, in drenched white shirts walking in the middle of the rain definitely got some stares but I'm alright with that. We also saw a giant snail while walking and we were both so amazed with it. And Elder Black and I feel completely fine after this division. We're not sick at all. Miracles.

- Sunday, we had Stake Conference in Santo Amaro. It was awesome. I had been feeling a little uneasy about my testimony, and the speakers (combined with the Holy Ghost) were able to help me know what I can do to continually strengthen my testimony in Christ.

Pensamento Espiritual:

It's been over a week since General Conference, and I wanted to share this message from Gabriel W. Reid's talk. This goes to all of my many missionary friends, including the ones who are not yet missionaries, or no longer missionaries.

Brother Reid shares,

[If] you are wondering whether you are good enough to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ, the answer is yes!

Not because you know everything. Not because you have every teaching skill. Not because you always feel capable or confident. Because you can love the Master Teacher!

And as you deepen your love for the One you teach about, He will teach you, walk beside you, and gradually make you into the teacher He knows you can become.

I know that as we love the Lord with all of our heart, we can become even greater teachers of His love and of His gospel. The first step is to show the Lord our desire to teach, to help, to serve, and He will magnify our efforts.

He knows your potential, and He knows what you can do to help feed His sheep. Do your best, and He will do the rest, continually molding you into the best teacher you can be.

I love you my dearest friends! Have a fantastic night and an even better week. If you have any thing that you feel inclined to share with me, please feel free. I delight in hearing about your lives and your challenges/successes 🙌

- Elder John Randall Gee 🇧🇷

- The Elders of the Capão Redondo Ward

- Me, soaking wet, with our best snail friend

